ANDOVER'S HONOR LIST

Over One Hundred and Sixty Young Men Now Enrolled in Various Branches of the Service. Some Now in Front Line Trenches.

After careful revision of all published lists of names of men in the service of our country, the Townsman has been able to give to its readers a correct list of men who are reflecting honor on their native or adopted town. Andover has reason to be proud of a number of her citizens who occupy high and important positions in service. There are at present 160 men from Andover in the American, Canadian, British and French forces. One of her adopted sons, Lance Corporal William Rae, fell at the battle of Loos. He left Andover early in the war and was the first to give his life for the cause of freedom.

Andover has the distinguished honor of having a man on General Pershing's staff in France in the person of Lieut-Colonel Marlborough Churchill. Every department of service has drawn from Andover and gladly all these men responded to do their part in the great world war for the suppression of militarism and to "make the world safe for democracy". From the office of lieutenant-colonel to that of private in the infantry forces we find Andover men. The navy as well as the army has drawn her share. Radio, aviation, and medical corps are well represented. Canadian and British Expeditionary Forces have men on their lists

A TRIBUTE TO THE FLAG

I have seen the glories of art and architecture and of river and mountain. I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau and the moon rise over Mont Blanc. But the fairest vision on which these eyes rested was the flag of my country in a foreign port. Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it, it is the symbol of the power and the glory and the honor of one hundred millions of Americans.—George F. Hoar

None of the cipher experts can equal his record of deciphering a Japanese message in less than an hour. In spite of this fact the message was deciphered and a translator did the rest.

CORNER STONE OF SCHOOL LAID

St. Augustine's Parish Educational Aims at Last Successfully Consummated. Much Credit Due to Leaders. Weather Ideal for Occasion.

The laying of the corner stone of the parochial school of St. Augustine's parish took place Sunday afternoon with impressive and appropriate exercises. Hopes long cherished by Rev. Fr. Frederick S. Riordan were finally realized and his untiring efforts were crowned with marked success.

A large assemblage of the members of his parish were present to witness the impressive ceremony. Ideal weather added much to the pleasure and interest of the occasion. At 2.30 o'clock the procession formed at the church and, headed by St. Mary's Cadet Drum and Bugle Corps of Lawrence, marched through Essex and Main streets, thence by Chestnut street to the new school on Central street, where the exercises were held. In the procession were the St. Mary's Cadets, Girls of the Red Cross of St. Mary's and the men of St. Augustine's parish.

The children, under the direction of Miss Anine G. Donovan, organist of St. Augustine's parish, sang "The Cross and the Flag" as the procession of priests marched to the platform near which the corner stone, inscribed "1917" lay in place. The ceremony of blessing the stone was very impressive, and rendered

BOSTON THEATRES

PARK SQUARE

Mae Marsh, the famous little celebrity, who is the star of Goldwyn's first great production, "Polly of the Circus," had had a meteoric career in motion pictures. She has become one of the screen's greatest and most popular stars in a very few years.

Miss Marsh, who is now only twenty years old, was born in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Her father was an officer of the Santa Fe railroad. Miss Marsh followed her sister Marguerite into the motion picture field. Her sister, using the name of Margaret Loveridge, had a part in a production being made by David W. Griffith at Los Angeles. One day Mae Marsh was seated on a box in the studio watching a rehearsal when she came under the notice of Mr. Griffith. He inquired who she was and someone told him she was the sister of Margaret Loveridge.

"Would you like to become a motion picture actress?" Mr. Griffith asked the little girl, and from the moment that she nodded assent her future was assured. Two years later she was the star of "The Birth of a Nation" and a year later the featured player of the great spectacle, "Intolerance."

Last September, Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, persuaded Miss Marsh at her home in California to become one of the stars of the company he was then forming, and Mr. Goldfish freely admits she was really the actual inspiration for the formation of the big Goldwyn corporation. She is under a long time contract to Goldwyn, and now that her hard work as "Polly" is ended she will soon be facing the cameras again in other Goldwyn productions of equal magnitude and beauty.

Goldwyn is now negotiating to show "Polly of the Circus" here. Among the other Goldwyn stars are Maxine Elliott, Mary Garden, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl and Mabel Normand.

COPLEY

The Henry Jewett Players will continue to act "The Man Who Stayed at Home" at the Copley theatre until further notice, the demand for seats being so great that the requests for its continuance cannot be refused. Its seventeenth week will therefore begin on Monday evening with every sign of large audiences throughout the remainder of its run.

The reasons for the success of this play are not difficult to find. It is timely, it tells a thrilling story of events that might easily have happened during the early days of the war, and it is well acted. These three factors contribute to make it one of the most popular dramas ever acted in Boston. It was put on at the Copley in June for a brief engagement, and the public has been coming to see it by the thousands ever since.

"The Man Who Stayed at Home" is of the immediate present. Its scenes, its characters and its plot are based upon actual events of the great war, and since this country has started to take its part in it, this play makes a direct appeal to all Americans. It shows clearly the German spy system, and the cleverness with which the British government set to work to thwart the enemies within their gates.

Seats may be obtained at the box office, they may be ordered by telephone, or patrons who are down town shopping may procure them at the regular prices at Filene's and Jordan's.

Due notice will be given of the date of the beginning of the regular repertory season at the Copley, and of the list of plays to be acted by the Henry Jewett Players.

SHUBERT

Direct from its season's run at the Bijou theatre, New York, and with the New York company and production, the attraction at the Shubert theatre for an engagement of two weeks, beginning Monday, October 1, will be Eugene Walter's latest melodramatic success, "The Knife".

Briefly, the story of "The Knife" concerns a high-bred Virginia girl who comes to New York on a shopping tour and suddenly and mysteriously drops out of sight. She is engaged to a prominent metropolitan surgeon, who appeals to a young lawyer friend to find the girl. In order to avoid the publicity usually attendant upon such cases, the matter is withheld from the police, but the trail is taken up by the fiance and the lawyer friend, who, after a series of thrilling situations, finally rescue the girl.

In "The Knife" Mr. Walter has written the most exciting melodrama of his entire career. From the time when the young surgeon rushes into the office of his lawyer friend, crying that his fiance has been abducted, until the fall of the final curtain, things happen with cyclonic rapidity.

The cast includes Olive Wyndham, Harry Mestayer, Henry Mortimer, Caroline Newcombe, Kathlyn Tracey, Gordon Burby, Hazel Burby, Cyrus Wood, William A. Norton and Ada Davis.

Matinees will be given on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Seats on sale at the box office now.

HOLLIS STREET

Henry Miller will present Ruth Chatterton in A. E. Thomas' newest comedy "Come Out of the Kitchen" at the Hollis Street Theatre, for a limited engagement, beginning Monday, October 1.

"Come Out of the Kitchen," with its present cast and production was presented first at the Columbia Theatre, San Francisco, a little over a year since. It was received in that city with such sensational enthusiasm that the capacity of the Columbia Theatre was taxed at every performance for five consecutive weeks. This is a record which has never been equaled before by any form of dramatic presentation in that city.

Following this record breaking engagement in San Francisco, Mr. Miller took Miss Chatterton and the original company intact direct to New York City where they were seen for thirty-two triumphant weeks at the Cohan Theatre. "Come Out of the Kitchen" proved one of the most pronounced successes of the New York season.

The play tells a fantastic story of a Southern family reduced in circumstances. They lease their ancestral estates to a Northern man, and through their inability to provide him with the servants he expects, members of the patrician family, unsuspected by him, assume the humble duties and wait upon their tenants. There grows out of this situation a pretty romance, which is told with sympathy and humor.

There is, to the comedy, just enough tugging at the heart-strings to set off the ever-occurring scenes of comedy which are played with nicety and delight.

"Come Out of the Kitchen" has a faultless cast, Mr. Miller having devoted extreme care in selecting the players. Miss Chatterton will be supported by Bruce McRae and a cast including Alice Baxter, Mrs. Charles G. Craig, Barbara Milton, Walter Connolly, William H. Same, Robert Ames, Saxon Kling, and Raymond Walburn, Frances Goodrich and others.

MAJESTIC

At the Majestic theatre, Tuesday evening, October 2, Daniel Frohman will present for the first time in this country the latest London melodramatic success, "Seven Days Leave." It is a modern military play and has been running at Henry Irving's Lyceum theatre for the past eight months. This will be Mr. Frohman's first theatrical production in over seven years, and the public who remember his many past productions will welcome his return to the activities of the stage.

The new play is a massive and elaborate scenic production and requires a large cast of players. Its theme in one of intrigue, conspiracy and diplomacy; and while not a war play, its chief incidents are those which have grown out of the great struggle. Its scenes are laid in a little village on the East Coast of England at the present time. The story deals with the endeavor of two spies, posing as Belgian refugees, to discover the secret of a new big gun which England has recently sent "out there". This leads to many startling and thrilling situations which has its finale in a very stirring episode. Included in the large cast are Cortenay Foote, H. Cooper Cliffe, W. L. Abington, Arthur Lewis, Harry Neville, Galway Herbert, Francis Bentzen, Arthur Nichols, Ann Andrews, Evelyn Varden, Meriam Collins, and Alice Belmore.

"The House of Glass" at Colonial Theatre, Lawrence

"The House of Glass," which is to be the offering of the Emerson Players at the Colonial theatre, Lawrence, next week, is a drama in four acts by Max Marcin, based on the story of Margaret Case, a woman unjustly accused and convicted, who, breaking her parole, is hounded by the law although she has led a blameless life. It is replete with tense situations, heart interest, and an absorbing plot which is one of the best written in many years.

Miss Dorothy Dickinson will assume the role of Margaret Case, the woman, and Leo Kennedy, the new leading man with the Emerson Players, will play the part of McClellen, the woman's unfailing friend. The play is such that all the other members of the company will have ample opportunity to display their ability, including Joseph Crehan, Lawrence Brooke, Franklyn Munnell, Tom Whyte, Maud Blair, Georgette Marcelle, Henrietta Connors and Eugenia Lyons.

The management of the Colonial has already given much publicity to the fact that they have inaugurated Monday evening, October 1, as Andover night, and it is to be hoped that the people of Andover will turn out and make this affair a gala event, as the company is very worthy of their support, being one of the very best of its kind in the country.

A few of the plays that they intend to produce are: "The Man Who Owns Broadway," a Cohan and Harris production, the week of the 8th; the week of the 15th, "The Heart of Wetona," from the pen of David Belasco; "The Man Who Stayed at Home," the week of the 22nd, that just at present is being played to capacity houses at the Copley theatre, Boston, by the Henry Jewett Players. In fact, they have contracted to bring all of the big dramatic and musical Broadway successes.

Red Cross Notes

The Red Cross needs the ready help of its members in order to carry out the plan of giving to each of our boys abroad and at home a present of useful articles at Christmas time. The New England Division has prepared a list of suggested articles which experience shows are most welcome and from which selections may be made. While no attempt is being made to standardize the package, it is desirable to choose only from this list.

It comprises: Playing cards, checkers, wash cloth, talcum powder, coarse No. 5 needles, writing pad, shoe laces, tooth powder, mouth organ, jews harp, 1 spool khaki and 1 spool black thread, Christmas card, cigarettes, tobacco and cigarette paper, chewing gum, box of matches, pencil, stamped envelopes, tooth brush, hard candy or chocolate, baseball, handkerchiefs, one game, bag, 13x10, to hold these things, made of khaki outing flannel or khaki denim, or any other serviceable color.

These articles are to be wrapped in a particular kind of bandanna handkerchief which can shortly be obtained from the local Red Cross headquarters. Thousands of these Christmas bags will be needed and in order that no soldier boy shall be forgotten, Red Cross members are asked not to delay preparing them.

The need for sweaters for the soldiers at Ayer and other New England camps is so urgent that the manager of the New England division of the Red Cross has designated Friday, October 12, Columbus Day, as "Sweater Day" for all of New England. At least 20,000 more sweaters are needed at Ayer alone, to be made sleeveless according to the regular Red Cross knitting directions. Every woman in New England who can knit is urged to complete a sweater by that day or earlier if possible, and send it in to the local Red Cross organization as soon as it is finished. The sweaters are then sent to the Supply Service headquarters in Boston, and are forwarded to the camps only on request of commanding officers, who distribute them. This method prevents duplication of giving, and ensures an equitable distribution. Unless the women respond to this appeal, many of our boys may be without sweaters these cold autumn days.

Ex-Representative William Halliday died Sunday morning at the residence of his brother, David Halliday, Ocean Park, near Old Orchard, Me. Three weeks ago Mr. Halliday, who was in ill health, left with his wife to spend a vacation at the home of his brother in an effort to regain his health. The deceased was born in Andover sixty-four years ago. His family removed to North Andover when he was a child and he had resided in the latter place thereafter. Mr. Halliday had been a member of the Legislature and had served faithfully and efficiently in various offices in the town, he being formerly a member of the boards of selectmen, assessors, health, registrars of voters and overseers of the poor. He was high in Masonic circles and was an active worker in the parish of the Congregational church. At the time of his death he was manager of the North Andover Coal Co. He leaves besides his widow and his brother, two sisters, Mrs. C. W. Reynolds and Miss Fannie Halliday. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from his late residence, 36 Church street, Rev. John L. Keedy of the Trinitarian Congregational church officiating. Burial was in the family lot, Ridgewood cemetery, with committal service by Mr. Keedy. The pall bearers were four nephews: Oliver W. Fiske of Beverly, Harry H. Hutchins of Lawrence, Fred B. Reynolds and H. Dana Currier.

An increase of wages was noted on the Department of Health and Charities payrolls this week. Patrick J. Johny Murphy, formerly of this city and at one time a New England League player with Brockton, Lawrence, Haverhill and other teams, has been named trainer of the University of Buffalo football team, Buffalo, N. Y. He has been trainer of the Buffalo club of the International League and last fall trained the Lafayette High eleven of Buffalo. He is making a success of this line of work.

Lawrence aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, at a meeting held Monday night voted to increase the death benefit of members in the army and navy from $100 to $1000. The members in the national army will also benefit by this increase. To raise this amount, the members voted to increase the dues fifteen cents a month. So far as known the Lawrence aerie is the first fraternal organization to take such action.

A committee representing the Retail Shoe Clerks of Lawrence met on Monday night and decided to form an association of all retail shoe clerks in the city. A general meeting will be held on Monday, October 8, at 6.30 p.m., in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The shoe clerks plan to cooperate with the Retail Clothing Association in obtaining uniform working and closing hours.

Lawrence is to have some brand new street cars. This is the latest news from the offices of the Bay State Street Railway Company. These cars, sixteen of them, are to be delivered and put into operation within the next month. It is confidently reported that some of them will be in operation either today or tomorrow on the Lawrence-Salem line. The new cars are of the convertible prepayment type, with a seating capacity of forty-four passengers. The aisles are wide and the platform broad. Each car costs $8,143. In other words, disregarding operating expenses, wages of conductors and motormen, cleaners and power, it would require 162,860 passengers at five cents each to pay for one of them. One feature of the new cars is that they are constructed to operate with trailers or like two cars trained. This has been found a great advantage in the large cities during rush hours, when thousands of people are trying to get to or from their work at practically the same time. The trailers practically double the capacity of each car. The new cars are equipped with all the latest safety devices and can not be started while the doors are open. If for any reason the doors open while the car is running, the power is automatically shut off, although the air brakes are not applied except by the motorman. Into these cars the engineers of the Laconia Car Company, cooperating with the engineers of the Bay State Street Railway Company, have put their best work. After the new cars have been put into operation in Lawrence other changes are to be made by the company which will insure the giving of much better service than at present.

CORNER STONE LAID

more so by the historic and beautiful surroundings.

The celebrant for the occasion was the Rt. Rev. Mons. Teeling of Lynn, assisted by Rev. Fr. George Haley of Merrimac, as deacon.

Philip L. Hardy, contractor of the structure, gave the trowel to Monsigner Teeling, who spread the cement, after which the box was deposited in the corner stone. John Hurley assisted the contractor in depositing the box. This box contained plans of the school, U. S. currency, a copy of the Lawrence Eagle of September 22, containing a picture and story of the school, a copy of the Boston Pilot, September 21, pictures of the Blessed Virgin and St. Augustine; medals and Agnes Dei.

The other clergymen present were Rev. Fr. McGlinchey of Boston, Promotor of the Propagation of the Faith, sub deacon; Rev. Fr. Daniel J. Fogarty, St. Augustine's church, master of ceremonies; Rev. Fr. Hickey, D. D., of Boston, supervisor of Parochial Schools in the archdiocese; Rev. Fr. James T. O'Reilly of St. Mary's, Lawrence; Rev. Fr. Charles O'Brien of Lynn; Rev. Fr. Walsh, Reading, Rev. Fr. Robert McCoy, O. M. I., Tewksbury; Rev. Fr. Dennis Lee, Amesbury; Rev. Fr. Edward Carey, St. Michael's, North Andover; Rev. Fr. Sherry, St. Patrick's, South Lawrence; Rev. Fr. Michael Sullivan, and Rev. Fr. Andrew Dodge, St. Mary's, Lawrence; Rev. Fr. William Cotter, Rev. Fr. Louis Tierney, and Rev. Fr. Gambini, Holy Rosary Lawrence; Rev. Fr. Frederick S. Riordan, Rev. Fr. William W. Donovan, St. Augustine's, Andover.

At the conclusion of the ceremony of laying the corner stone, the congregation sang Cardinal O'Connell's "Hymn to the Holy Name."

After the singing of this hymn, Rev. Fr. Riordan introduced Dr. Hickey, who preached the sermon, and with a few well chosen remarks referred to the importance of the event, both for the parish and for the town of Andover. He acknowledged the generous support of the people of St. Augustine's.

THE SERMON

Dr. Hickey preached a very eloquent and impressive sermon and spoke from Eccles x:1.9 "Rejoice in thy youth, and in the days of thy youth keep thy heart in that which is good and walk in the ways of thy heart."

He said in part: "This day is a day of intense joy and promise to the children of this parish. This day the blessing of the most High God is solemnly invoked upon the foundation stone of a great structure which is to stand a permanent monument to the thorough education and training of Christian Youth. This day the prayers of the Holy Mother Church rise up to Heaven imploring God to make strong and impregnable this fortress builded for the preservation and protection of the faith and virtue of innocent Catholic children.

"The joy of this day is not a passing thrill of appeal and interest limited to the little ones of this parish. Men and women, priests and people, members of the Visible Church of Christ, citizens of the community must all rejoice in the contemplation of this inspiring and significant spectacle. For we are all witnesses of another worthy achievement in the cause of Christ and His Church and in the interest of family and community, peace and happiness. A work for God stands begun before our eyes. God's work brings God's blessing. God's blessing is His greatest gift to town and city, state and nation.

"He who represents the church in this parish has conceived and planned this mighty undertaking as a means essential to the safe-guarding of the spiritual interests of this portion of God's vineyard. You pastor with leadership devoted and all absorbing has earnestly labored to bring this precious blessing into the lives of the people of Andover. A full meaning and influence of this project cannot be measured in a moment. The experience of the past is a most convincing pledge for the future. Wherever the Catholic school has been established there has the faith flourished and Christian charity burned brightly in the souls of men for the edification and inspiration for all within the sphere of this sacred influence. I congratulate most sincerely your pastor, Father Riordan, and I offer tribute for this work of which he is instigator, adviser and guardian. The parish and the community are his debtors in such great measure that only future generations will realize adequately and repay with lasting gratitude. Launching this project amidst difficulties, anxieties and fears which are of the nature of every great work, he is proving himself loyal to the traditions of that honored community of which he is so distinguished a member. The service of the Augustinian Fathers in the cause of Christian education in this vicinity needs but be mentioned to be appreciated. We are happy indeed to-day to have part in the erection of a new monument to their zeal and devotion in this most worthy work.

"Leadership and inspiration accomplish nothing without earnest, self-sacrificing co-operation. By special dispensation of Divine Providence in this great nation of ours no advance in the interests of the church can be successfully completed without the assistance and unflagging support of our devoted Catholic people. This building has been made possible because the faithful of this parish are building it. Of means large and small, bountiful and meagre, each gives of his portion that this work may be established and maintained. Is it not clear evidence of the truth of the things that appear not this generosity whole souled and cheerful in the cause of Christian education? Ah, my dear brethren, I congratulate you most cordially on your lively faith and its manifestation. Rejoice to-day for by united effort you are building a Catholic school for Catholic children. You are safeguarding for all time the most precious inheritance of youth—the faith of heaven. You are preserving from danger and from evil those spiritual interests which are enduring unto eternity. Rejoice for as long as these walls stand, the little ones for your hearts and homes will be kept firm in that which is good and from earliest years they will be led to walk in the ways of their hearts enlightened by faith and strengthened by the grace of God.

"The education and care of childhood and youth is the pressing interest of our day and times. No man is so dull and stupid that he does not appreciate the axiomatic truth, 'Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it.' The future welfare of individuals, states and nations is in the hands of the children of to-day. Peace and prosperity are hanging in the balance and swinging on this vital issue of the training of youth. How can parents, how can the community, best fulfill this momentous responsibility towards their children?

"The child is in this world to find his place, to contribute his service and through his service to live life well. The first necessity is to offer him acquaintance with conditions which surround him, to explain and to interpret every phase of human activity which has acted as a cause of this complex condition of affairs in which he finds himself. The world is a strange place; it is replete with wonders. Before a man can appreciate his surroundings and use them to their best advantage, he must understand them in the light of their history and development. (a) The home is the child's first interest—then the community in which he lives. Why do they exist; what is their purpose? What are his duties and responsibilities in this sphere of life? This we can characterize as his social

The members of Troop 2 of Andover were most intensely interested in a talk given to them by E. V. French last Wednesday night in the vestry of the South church. Mr. French is an authority in matters pertaining to fires and insurance and spoke most interestingly on several fires which he has witnessed, laying special stress on the famous Salem fire. The troop was most fortunate in being able to hold its meeting in the South church where a stereopticon operated by Hardwick Bigelow could be used, as Mr. French was well supplied with graphic pictures of the fire.

After the talk the speaker explained to the boys the merits and workings of the sprinkler system in factories, showing them a sprinkler valve in detail. He also emphasized the importance of Boy Scouts holding themselves in prompt readiness to mobilize, as he maintained that in the Salem fire itself a large body of boys could have rendered invaluable services in preventing the various fires from spreading.

The boys will certainly be profited by this talk and all felt that should ever an emergency arise they could be of great assistance.

Tomorrow afternoon the members of the troop are planning to go on a hike to Foster's Pond under leadership of Scoutmaster H. G. Tyer. They will take their suppers and a good time is looked forward to.

Primary Echoes

The primary on Tuesday will have a far-reaching effect on Republican politics in Massachusetts, and, in fact, let us hope on all politics in Massachusetts for some time to come. Based upon an almost total absence of issues (the only present issue being a false one), a gentleman who has no other claim to public office than his desire to hold office, butted into the political situation which most people supposed was a fixed situation for at least the present year.

That any attention at all was given to the candidacy of Mr. Cushing was due entirely to the fact that the single false issue two years previously brought to him thirty or forty thousand votes, which he expected again, and to the further fact that a group of men who had been long considered powerful factors in party politics in Boston and some other sections wanted to get even for real or fancied grievances they or their friends had suffered at the hands of the Governor. Furthermore, two years as Chief executive had put the responsibility upon Governor McCall to play the game from the position of carrying the ball, and this carried with it the responsibility of putting out of his way some of the obstructions that were encountered. This meant disappointing some people who wanted to hold office. It meant vetoing some projects that were dear to the hearts of some people, and it meant establishing numerous policies for which he had to bear the responsibility and which it is always easy for some people to criticize. All these disgruntled elements were rallied to the support of Mr. Cushing either by his chosen leaders or by himself personally. But all of them failed to appreciate that though political bosses may propose, the great voting public disposes, and in this case, they have disposed most effectually of the political ambitions of one of the state's most aggressive self-seekers in many a year.

It is not wise, perhaps, at this time to discuss the methods followed by Mr. Cushing and his supporters to secure votes. But we cannot refrain from referring to one instance because it is so close at hand and because some Andover people were concerned by it. The Governor vetoed the Merrimack River improvement proposition upon the grounds that the state could not afford to bear the enormous expense during this period when the world war is making its exacting demands. That alone was sufficient grounds. He did not discuss the merits of the case, and it is not necessary to discuss the merits of the case at the present time, except to call attention to the attitude of Mr. Cushing and his followers in entirely ignoring the Governor's basis for a veto, and insisting that the merits of the case showed that he was opposed to the project. It was not enough for this general statement to be made, but upon the approval of Mr. Cushing himself in a signed circular spread broadcast through the Merrimack valley and in paid advertisements in some of the Merrimack valley newspapers false statements were made in support of Mr. Cushing's candidacy saying that he was in favor of the improvement and if elected would approve the project. Any man who is big enough to aspire to be the Governor of Massachusetts should be too big to lend his approval to such mis-statements as were contained in that circular, and any man big enough to really be Governor, would never think of pledging himself on any legislative matter at all.

No better illustration could be found that the public knows what is right and usually does it, than the result registered by the voters of the Merrimack valley in Tuesday's primary. By a majority of practically 3 to 1, they showed that they were three times as big as Governor McCall's opponent expected them to be, in insisting that the enormous problems of the present day demand a patriotic attitude that is not measured by a single act connected with a single local issue.

The Governor may well be proud of the high approval registered by the voters of Massachusetts not only for him but against the methods and campaign carried on by his opponent.

Editorial Cinders

The Andover Guild has been a fixture among Andover activities for many years. Organized as a clearing-house for the various movements for charitable work and social service, which previously had not been well conducted, it has answered an increasing need from year to year. Like all movements of a similar nature, it has had its ups and downs, but by and large it measures high in its attempt to reach a standard of efficient service for community work. It is not surprising that difficulties are met with in securing funds necessary to continue its activities this year, and the appeal which has just been sent out by the committee emphasizes the seriousness of the situation. The appeal, however, should not have for a moment recognized the possibility of having this work abandoned, and we have a feeling that it did not need to have recognized even as much as it did the possibility of limiting the support very much. Andover needs the Guild. It needs more activities such as it might provide rather than less. It may not be easy to get the money required at this time, but we believe that aside from the direct appeals incident to the war itself, there is no local activity more deserving than is the Guild, and we hope for such a response by Andover people as will lead the Guild managers to keep up their good work, and privilege them to advise the Andover public that they are ready and willing to go even farther ahead.

We publish elsewhere a carefully checked list of men engaged in the service of the country, registering from Andover. This list is open for corrections and changes, and the Townsman will keep it as a standing roll of honor until there is good reason for ceasing to publish it. From week to week changes and additions will be made, and that it may have a real service for Andover people who are interested in the boys who have gone to the front, we earnestly urge everybody who knows of any errors or omissions in it, or who knows of any items of interest in connection with the men who are in it, to communicate with Miss Farmer at the Townsman office. The Townsman will lend itself by every possible service it can render, to assist the committee chosen to look after this work officially for Andover, and as the official reporter for that committee's work assures the Andover people of full and reliable information. The committee chosen, as has already been stated, is: John C. Angus, Frank H. Hardy, and Miss Nellie H. Farmer.

Andover cast a good sized vote on Tuesday, showing a larger percentage of its total Republican vote registered, than most cities and towns in the commonwealth. The interest was largely centered around the contest for Representative, in which Mr. Gleason secured a very hearty renomination; the contest for Clerk of Courts, to which an Andover favorite was nominated; and the important contest of all, in which Governor McCall had the flattering endorsement of a vote almost 7 to 1 over that given his opponent.

At the close of his campaign in 1915, Mr. Grafton Dulaney Cushing announced that if defeated, he should not again seek the governorship. At the close of his campaign in 1917, the voters of Massachusetts made a similar announcement with regard to that gentleman. The voters are much more likely to keep their pledge than Mr. Cushing showed he was his.

Food Economy Meeting

The Andover Equal Suffrage League invite the women of Andover to a meeting on Food Economy to be held at the Andover Guild House at 3.30 Wednesday afternoon, October 3. Mrs. Schuyler S. Herron will be the speaker. Mrs. Herron has been giving talks in many towns throughout the state during the summer. She is the president of the New England Home Ecomonics Association, has been for five years the chairman of the Home Ecomonics Department of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs, and is also chairman of the Food Conservation Department of the Massachusetts Equal Suffrage Association.

It is hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to hear Mrs. Herron speak on a subject of vital importance to all housewives.

THE PRIMARIES IN ANDOVER

Andover Voters Give Governor McCall a Large Vote on Tuesday. Representative Gleason and Clerk of Courts Frost Winners

Fine weather brought out a good-sized vote in Andover on Tuesday when the State primaries were held from 12 o'clock noon, until 8 o'clock in the evening. Considering the quietness of the pre-election campaigning and the fact that other interests were taking up the attention of the voters, the vote brought out in Andover was a good-sized one, especially on the Republican side. In all there were 614 ballots cast, divided into precincts as follows: Precinct 1—Republican 515, Democratic 58; Precinct 2—Republican 32, Democratic 9.

Governor McCall as usual received a handsome endorsement here, leading his opponent, Grafton D. Cushing, by 385 votes. The vote stood 455 for McCall and 70 for Cushing. Representative Gleason, Attorney General Attwill, Auditor Alonzo B. Cook, and Clerk of Courts Archie B. Frost were all given large votes. Mr. Gleason won the nomination in the contest with Peter Holt of North Andover, this being the former's third successful contest for that honor. He led Mr. Holt in both precincts by 332 votes. He also carried Middleton by 32 to 12 votes and was defeated in North Andover by only 70 votes.

Mr. Frost received a handsome endorsement by his friends in town, winning over his nearest competitor, A. Franklin Priest, by 434 votes to 49.

Dr. E. C. Conroy, by use of the sticker system, received the Democratic nomination for senator and will oppose the present incumbent, James R. Tetler of Methuen. John Traynor, by receiving five votes becomes the Democratic nominee for representative against Mr. Gleason.

Owing to the use of the separate ballot system the work of the counters was simplified and the result was announced shortly before 11 o'clock. The result:—

W.R.C. Notes

General Wm. F. Bartlett Corps 127, held a regular meeting Tuesday evening. The president, Mrs. Mary Valentine, gave a very interesting account of the National Convention W. R. C., held in Boston. In a report from the kit committee, Mrs. Carrie Buchan, chairman, Mrs. Belle Eastman and Mrs. William Frye, it was shown that about seventy-five kits have been given to Andover soldiers and sailors. Fifty dollars have been presented to the veterans of Post 99.

An invitation, from the Auxiliary to the Sons of Veterans, inviting the members of the Corps to meet with them next Monday evening, October 1, was read and accepted.

At the next regular meeting, a rehearsal for inspection, will be held and members are requested to attend.

At the close of the meeting, ice cream and cake were served, by Mrs. Annie Davis and Miss Jennie Thompson.

Rally Day at the South Church

Unusual preparations are being made under the direction of Superintendent George A. Torrey, for the rallying of the Sunday School of the South Church. After the morning service the school by classes will march up from the vestry to the auditorium, where the formal promotions from the Primary and Junior grades will take place.

A new feature will be the introduction of some fourteen from the Cradle Roll who are entering the primary classes. A few snap shots from Northfield will be given by the delegates of the Summer School.

In the evening at 7.45, there will be more complete reports from the delegates, illustrated by stereopticon, to which the public is invited. The delegates were Miss Florence I. Abbott, and the Misses Lillian Holt, Irene Valentine, Charlotte Keith, Irene Franklin and Louise Gilbert.

Inquiry Reception

The Society of Inquiry of Phillips Academy gave a reception to the new men in the school, last Saturday evening in the Borden Gymnasium. Roger M. Woolley, president of the society, presided, and outlined the purpose of the reception and the work of Inquiry. Addresses were made by Principal Stearns, Professor Forbes, Frank L. Quinby, Vaughan S. Blanchard, and the managers of baseball, and the Phillipian.

Books for Soldiers

At the request of the National Government, the American Library Association has undertaken to raise one million dollars to be used in building and maintaining public libraries in the various military camps throughout the country.

The field to be covered by these libraries includes service for recruits, for men in training and at the front, for hospitals, for sailors on shipboard and at naval stations. It is planned to reach each man in every branch of war service. After the war, both equipment and books will be used for other library work.

Every city and town containing a library has been asked to give an amount equal to five per cent of its population. Andover's share is $350. To date, $257 has been subscribed.

It is important that the full quota for the town should be contributed by Saturday night. Andover, which has never failed to do its part in every good cause, must not fail now. Contributions may be left at the library or sent to Frederic S. Boutwell, treasurer of the trustees.

Service Stars for Andover's Enlisted Men

The committee of interested citizens, George Dick, Ernest King, and Fred L. Collins, are desirous of placing a Service Flag on the home of each enlisted man from Andover, and as other funds permit, keep the boys supplied with cigarettes and other necessities.

The Committee will forward all packages to the Chaplain of each regiment so as to assure delivery to the Andover boys.

The Committee have placed mite boxes in most of Andover's stores and factories and urge the citizens to do their bit, for the boys will be a long way from home. Anyone desirous of helping, may send cheques to George Dick, Central Fire Station, and Ernest C. King, 48 Elm street. Acknowledgements will be made through the Andover Townsman and Lawrence papers.

The committee wish to report a good return from the dance held in the Town Hall, September 21, and thank all those who helped the cause.

Families with two enlisted men are: Corporal George M. Collins, J. Everett Collins, Chestnut street; Corporal Ralph De Fazio, Charles De Fazio, High street; Harold Larkin, Eldred Larkin, Chestnut street; Capt. Harry B. Erving, John M. Erving, Salem street; Philip S. Radford Abbot, George E. Abbot, Central street; Henry J. Remarkable Yield of Potatoes on Local Field

George F. Smith of the Smith and Dove Company, planted one and three-quarters of an acre of potatoes last spring on the cricket-field, near the depot, and recently dug four hundred bushels from the plot. hailing from our midst. The "Kilties" also are proud to acknowledge some of their men as belonging to Andover.

It is deserving of more than special notice that a number of our men have been in service three years. James Cavan, Co. Among those who have served two and one-half years are James Fettes, David Craoll, Sergeant Major David Waldie, all in France.

We mention with pride a few of our officers, and among others Lieutenant Markham W. Stackpole, chaplain 102d Field Artillery, who wields a splendid influence over the boys in their athletic sports.

Among the captains we mention two men well known in Andover, Capt. Bartlett H. Hayes and Capt. Harry B. Erving. The first lieutenants number four as follows: Frank M. Smith, son of Chief of Police F. M. Smith; William B. Higgins, Phillips G. Morrison, and George E. Abbot. Second lieutenants: Ludwig K. Moorehead, Charles L. Ward, James W. Feeney, Philip W. Thomson, James K. Selden.

Farewell Reception to Fr. D. J. Fogarty

The parishioners of St. Augustine's parish met Wednesday night in the church to bid farewell to Rev. Fr. Fogarty. A purse of gold was presented by Rev. Fr. Riordan, who in a few well-chosen words voiced the esteem in which the departing assistant was held by the people of the church. Fr. Fogarty graciously replied and thanked the donors for their gift.

Fr. Fogarty came to Andover in 1914. He left Thursday morning for Bryn Mawr, Pa., where he will be assistant to Rev. Fr. Nugent.

HORMAN-SPICKLER

Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Patrick's parish house, in South Lawrence, Miss Carolyn Spickler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Spickler of the Pond district, and Agustin Horman, son of Charles Horman of Collinsville, were united in marriag. The bride, who was attended by her sister, Miss Lois Spickler, wore a travelling suit of blue broadcloth and the bridesmaid wore blue satin. Richard McOwen, a friend of the groom, was best man.

A reception followed at the home of the bride, on Lowell street, and the couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Spickler, the bride's parents.

The quantities of beautiful presents bore testimony of the esteem their friends have for them. The presents consisted of cut-glass, silver, rugs, chairs, linen and clocks; a beautiful china-closet and dinner set also. The co-workers of the bried in the Red Cross work, presented them with a beautiful blanket and one-half dozen silver spoons. Friends were present from Boston, Lowell, Collinsville, Lawrence, North Andover and Andover. Mrs. Horman has the best wishes of her many friends in West Andover.

"A Country Fair"

To-morrow evening a Country Fair will be held in the Osgood schoolhouse, for the benefit of the Red Cross. The people residing in the Osgood and Pond districts have worked hard for some time, for the benefit of the Red Cross. They have held weekly meetings, which were well attended. An interesting program is in preparation for the Fair and refreshments will be for sale. A small admission fee will be charged. A large attendance is solicited by the committee in charge: Mrs. Fred Cress, Miss Mary Frazier, Mrs. George Towle, Charles Bailey and Ansel Frost.

Community Singing

Many articles have been printed in regard to the Community singing in Philadelphia, in the Public Ledger. They took place in the open air. An association was formed in April, the aim purely civic. The music is the means to an end—to foster true democracy. There is no organized chorus; various musical societies offered service to lead and to help with a variety of entertainment but the object is to draw out the masses to unite in song; old songs that stir the heart to high endeavor, 9000 at one meeting sang together classical songs and hymns. Even the Hallelujah Chorus was given. Children were given leading parts in the selection. War calls by buglers, old time melodies, patriotic songs, anything the crowd could do together was up. Printed sheets with the words and music in part, were issued and are sold at the association head quarters. A lawn festival was given at a military camp, bands joining in such service. No organization, no leaders, no rehearsals, but spontaneous out-break into song where the people are gathered together, sort of Salvation Army style. I judge forty organizations contribute aid.

This method for reaching fields ready for sowing is to be commended for smaller communities. C.H.A.

Quite a number of canoeists were on the Shawsheen Saturday and Sunday. With the changing foilage, etc., the meadows never looked prettier or more picturesque.

There was a large attendance at the Christian Endeavor social held in the Congregational church vestry on Saturday evening, and everybody present reports a very enjoyable social evening.

The concert committee is busily engaged in rehearsing the children for the Congregational Sunday School concert which promises to be the best one held for a long time. Everybody will be welcome.

Presented with Lodge Emblem

The regular meeting of Ballardvale lodge, No. 105, I.O.G.T., was held Monday evening. There was a good attendance. One of the interesting features of the evening was a presentation of a handsome Good Templar pin to Miss Clara Moody in recognition of her faithful and energetic work for the order. Miss Moody thanked the lodge for the gift and showed her appreciation of the confidence and friendship of the lodge members.

Andover Natural History Society

About twenty-five members of the Boston Mycological Club visited Andover as guests of Andover Natural History Society, last Saturday. Members of the society and friends brought the number up to fifty. Among friends present, were Mrs. E. G. Raymond, and Mrs. F. B. Ewing, of Michigan, sister and neice of Miss Charlotte Helen Abbott, also Fred E. White, of Florence, Arizona, cousin of Mrs. Frank M. Foster.

About fifteen of the party arrived from Boston at 9 o'clock and under the guidance of James Brewster, walked to Indian Ridge in a search for mushrooms, and then to Mr. Brewster's home, near Rabbitt's Pond, to join the rest of the party, who had been searching for mushrooms in the woods beyond the pond. More than fourteen different varieties of mushrooms were found. These were identified and placed on exhibition by Miss Jennie F. Conant, secretary of the club, as follows: amanita muscaria, poisonous; armillaria mellia, coprinus comatus, boletus versipellis, laccaria laccata, peziza aurantia, paxillus involutus, cortinarius rodes, collybia scorzoneria, marasmius oreades, (fairy ring), polyporus cinnabrinus, dacdalia quercina, coprinus micaceus, scleroderma vulgare.

Three different varieties, millariamellia (honey mushroom), coprinus comatus and coprinus micaceus, were cooked and eaten.

Basket lunch was served at one o'clock and Caterer Rhodes furnished hot coffee. After lunch Oscar Hill, president of the Mycological Club, gave a short talk on the different mushrooms found. Another short walk was taken by some, before returning to Boston about 4 o'clock.

Communication from Salvation Army, Lawrence

Dear Sir:—

It has come to my attention of late how great a wastage of good food there is liable to be in connection with the home and market gardens. Considerable quantities of vegetables are allowed to lie upon the ground unused, that may do some families a great kindness if brought within their reach.

We refer for instance to the summer squash, now ripe and hard, the large cucumbers, ripened, and the small potatoes, windfall apples, etc. These and great quantities of other products of the garden will make good wholesome food if taken care of in time. To be sure it requires a little skill and some patient instruction to enable the people to use these articles of food and make them into palatable dishes, but the Salvation Army Offices will gladly render this service. In fact if you kindly give this item publicity, Adjutant Chamberlain of Lawrence will call for gleanings of the gardens and orchards, and endeavor to get the gifts into the hands of those who will utilize same to good advantage. Such gifts might if quantities admit, form a harvest Festival for the Poor.

Any call addressed to 206 Broadway, Lawrence, or Phone 2919 will receive Adjutant Chamberlain's prompt attention. Thanking you for space and kindly interest manifested, we remain

War Condition in Alsace-Lorraine

In Alsace-Lorraine, as indeed throughout all Germany, the food is bad. The war bread is uneatable. It is not known of what it is composed. A loaf of this bread when examined was found to have a thick outer crust. Between this crust and the crumb there was a gap an inch wide. The inner part of the loaf has almost the consistency of clay or putty. It adhered to the knife when the loaf was cut through. This bread has a purgative effect. This is the reason why it cannot be consumed continuously. It is thought possible that the prevalence of contagious dysentery is partly due to the use of war bread.

Dysentery is extremely widespread. Persons suffering from serious attacks are sometimes allowed by medical orders a few pounds of white flour instead of war bread. The consumption of cabbage and kohlrabi, which was universal last winter, has likewise had a disastrous effect on the health of the population. The cause of this is not known, but the fact is undoubted. Infant mortality amounts to about 50 per cent of the newly born. Old people with but slight powers of resistance, are dying off rapidly. The supplies of food available for the mass of the population are wholly inadequate and the result is a declining vitality. There is plenty of food to be obtained, however, by people who are able to pay. I stayed at a friend's house in the country district where many small farmers obtain good results from productive soil. My friends sometimes bought whole calves in the night time unobserved. They sent the servant girl to her family which lives on a small farm and she would return with butter and eggs. No questions were asked as to price. The farmers would sometimes charge $1.25 to $3 a pound for butter and 12 cents apiece for eggs, and so forth; but the price was paid without a demur, this being the only method of obtaining supplies.

The officers of the German army had recourse to the ingenious device of employing farmers' sons as orderlies. These are allowed to go home on leave for a couple of days and they return with supplies for their employers. As an example of the bread famine, I have seen advertisements of "fine flour" sheets made of wood shavings at the price of five cents per pound.—Transcript

The soldiers are encouraged to sing in chorus with leaders at each Y.M.C.A. building.

Held Missionary Meeting

The vestry at the Congregational church was completely filled at the midweek service last evening. It was a missionary meeting and Mrs. Ralph S. Harlow gave the address of the evening which was both interesting and instructive. She spoke with great earnestness and enthusiasm in regard to her mission work in Turkey and threw much light on many of the political and religious problems that will have to be solved in the near future.

Violin Talk

Today, in all ranks of society, it is considered necessary that young people should play some musical instrument. Why not the violin? Mr. Joseph Emile Daudelin, former pupil of the famous Paris Conservatoire, of the Briggs-Allen School, Andover, Saturdays, other days Steinert Hall, Boston.

Canning Exhibition a Grand Success

The exhibition of canned fruits and vegetables by the girls' clubs of this town, surpassed all expectations of the committee in charge. The exhibition was held in the library of the Punchard school, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, and the showing made delighted all who attended the exhibition. Thirty-two girls exhibited canned goods.

Miss Helen Norris of Amherst Agricultural college was assisted by Miss Esther Gilbert of Haverhill, domestic science teacher, and Clifton F. Goodwin, supervisor of school gardens of Haverhill, in awarding the state ribbons to members of each club, having highest percentage. The quality of work, of each member, who exhibited three jars of vegetables, two of fruit and one of greens, was judged according to color, appearance of jar, whether whole or mushy, over-cooked or under-cooked, fulness and arrangement of pack and the label.

Sarah Bodwell and Blanche Holmes had percentage of 9.15 on their products and both received the blue ribbons from Amherst Agricultural college. Harriet Cheney and Isabel Hill were tied for blue ribbons and each received a blue ribbon from the state. Elizabeth Morse of Help Hoover club received percentage of 90 and received the red ribbon from the state. Margaret May of the Putnam club also received the red ribbon from the state.

Florence Abbott of Ballardvale received honorable mention. She was the only one to exhibit from the Shawsheen club, and as there was no competition, no ribbon was awarded. The other girls who had the proper number of jars and received percentage of over 80, were Natalie Page, Ruth Hill, Helen Conkey, Margaret May, Katherine Weeks, Debra Reddig, Rachel Boutwell, Lucile Lloyd and Margaret Bullock.

The prizes given for the best and largest collection of canned fruits and vegetables were awarded as follows: First, Katherine Weeks; second, Sarah Bodwell; third, Ruth Hill; honorable mention, Rachel Boutwell.

Special prizes to Thrift club: First, Fannie Lewis; second, Marion Henderson; third, Julia Nichols.

Prizes for canning demonstration: First, Natalie Page; second, Margaret Bullock; third, Elizabeth Garrison.

The exhibition closed Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

inheritance—a knowledge of which is a necessary part of the educational process.

"(b) National and community prosperity can best be explained in the history of the past. The ideals of men and women of to-day reflect the noble thoughts of their ancestors. The child must have acquaintance with history and literature—these make up his literary inheritance.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

(c) The child soon learns to marvel at the wonder and the power of nature and her laws. Science and mathematics must be unfolded to him.

"(d) The world is a beautiful place to live. There are wondrous colors to please the eye and entrancing sounds to charm the ear. The inheritance of the beautiful and the aesthetic must be appreciated if entire living is to be the child's full proportion.

Social, literary, scientific, aesthetic truths and inheritances—shall we stop here? Is there nothing more to which the child has right? Sad indeed it is to realize that many, many educators of youth consider their obligations fulfilled in the presentation, oft and skillful, of these four inheritances.

"But we Catholics in our faith know full well that all these wonders of nature and of man were gross and cheap indeed if the knowledge of religion and religious truth were denied us. Catholics glory in the realization of the fact that God, Creator Omnipotent, has spoken to His people. He has told them of Himself, of His divine attributes, of His wonderful purposes in creating the world and man. If we are to know what life really is, we must know the word of God. To attempt to educate without the teaching of religious truth is to leave the responsibility untouched in its essential. The child thus educated is deprived of his richest, noblest inheritance; he is left to grope his way through life in the dim half light of human reason and human experience.

"We Catholics are in full possession of the truth. We have definite religious facts to impart in the educational process. What God has said, what God has given, these are our treasures, preserved by a divinely founded, divinely guided teaching church and they give life and light to every form and kind of human knowledge.

"(1) Perfect social relations are maintained between men only when they are constructed on the ideals presented by revealed truth. Home life must be built on the model of Nazareth, where children obey because the authority of the parent enjoys the sanction of heaven. The state and nation is loved and respected because it is the preserver and defender of our rights and because in the assignment of duties it speaks with the voice of God.

"(2) True science is but the revelation of the infinite wisdom of God in the perfection of nature's laws and processes.

"(3) History and literature recount the story of God's dealings with men. Every page is evidence of His Providence in safeguarding men's highest interest. By chastisement and suffering, God reminds His creatures of their irreverence and sins.

"(4) The beauty of the earth and heaven is only truly appreciated when it becomes the vision of the magnificence of God, for the heavens proclaim the glory of God.

"Thus do I say, my dear brethren, that the inheritance of religious truth is most priceless and precious in itself and it exerts an all pervading, all permeating influence in every form of human knowledge. God is truth and from this radiant centre comes all the learning that is for man's complete development and growth. If we ignore the Centre and the Source, we are as foolish travellers who rush madly here and there with no fixed plan of their journey's destination."

Dr. Hickey read a clipping from a newspaper of September 22, 1917, an account of a conference of non-Catholic clergymen, in a discussion of lack of religious instruction in the schools and predicting that unless something were done America would become Pagan. Dr. Hickey rejoiced that these men were seeing the light and added that the Roman Catholic church, through its parochial schools, supported ungrudgingly by the faithful people of the church, was providing an education for its youth that was food for the soul as well as for the mind.

"But one may question: you are confusing the mission of the church with the mission of the school. To teach the truths of heaven is the business of the church. It is a province and field of activity in which the school has no place. In return I ask, what is the school? The school is the place of preparation, it is the training ground for the unfolding and developing of human talent, it must be the sanctuary of truth. Is there truth apart from God? Can man live completely and rise to his full dignity in ignorance of God? Ah, my dear brethren, a comprehensive view of education leads us quickly and easily to a conclusion inevitable in this consideration.

"Students of childhood have compared the mind of a child to a garden. It is a fertile spot where trees of knowledge and flowers of virtue are planted and flourish. To secure rich fruits in this garden, care, faithful, persistent, must be employed. This care must be intelligent care; it must consider the nature of the various seeds to be implanted in order that the desired fruits of the cultivation may be generous and gratifying. Men do not plant oaks in gardens prepared for roses. If the child's mind is to be made receptive for religious truth, it is the school which must perform the task of preparation. If you refuse to plant seed of God's doctrine during five active days of the child's life; if you give exclusive attention to the implanting of knowledge, purely secular in content and purpose, with the least reference to its divine source, how can you hope for a faithful reception of this seed of divine truth on one brief hour on one single day of the week? It is absurd to imagine that the mind and heart of a young child can grow in full love and appreciation of the truths of heaven when these truths are not part and parcel of his daily mental training. There is no comparison, scientific or practical, between the method of the Sunday school and the system of daily religious instruction.

"By the very sublimity and importance and value of religious truth, by the very structure and nature of the child's mind, the Catholic church has been compelled to build and to maintain schools where religious thoughts may become the central interest of the child and take a normal, secure place in his growth and development.

"The method of instruction in religious truth and in training for those virtues which are the flower of divine knowledge is perfect in detail in our parochial schools. Catholic educators do not measure their efforts in this direction by the comparatively brief time given each week to the teaching of Christian doctrine. The religious atmosphere of the school, the crucifix, the pictures symbolic of religious mystery, the prayers, the frequent and devout reception of the sacrements, the inspiring personality of our religious teachers—these are the effective elements in work of leading little ones to an enthusiasm for the good things of God.

"I wonder if we Catholics are ever sufficiently conscious of our debt to our religious teachers. I wonder if we are really appreciative of the extent and value of these sacrifices. Inspired by an intense loyalty to their faith, impelled by an all consuming charity, these heroic men and women cheerfully give up all things to the service of Christian education. The Catholic school is blessed beyond all schools. It glories in the devotion of a teaching staff which in its individual members is a concrete embodiment of those high ideals and purposes for which the system exists and labors.

"We have declared that schools are built to protect eternal truth and to mold successfully into the lives and characters of little children. Devotion to God, self-sacrifice, earnestness of purpose, fidelity to duty, these and countless other virtues, shine in the children's presence every day. Can we with words express and measure this blessed influence? Can we with human minds encompass the service of eternal value which the religious teacher offers to those under her charge? The Catholic school built by the sacrifices of devoted people, taught in the sacrifice of divinely called brothers and sisters, is the wonder of the present day in the religious life of our great nation."

Dr. Hickey here told the story of a papal delegate who had traveled all over Europe in his mission, also in the Far East. He had seen all the wonders of the church, he knew of their services to mankind and when told that he must see America he said that there could exist nothing there which could interest him. Yet he had scarcely landed in this country when he beheld the tremendous sacrifices of the men and women who had given that parochial schools might be erected where their children could receive education and religious instruction in their faith, and declared that nothing in Europe or the Far East compared with it.

"Impressed he was, and rightly so. The nations of the earth have given martyrs, confessors, doctors, saints of every age and station for the glory of God's Kingdom on earth. But we of the United States are doing our full share in the furtherance of this Kingdom by preserving in faith and Christian virtue the men and women of future generations.

"In this great field of labor we are but loyal to the most ancient and glorious traditions of the Catholic church. The church has always fostered true education. She has ever bitterly opposed pseudo-education—the education which dares to ignore that man is immortal and that he lives not by bread alone but by every word that comes from the mouth of God. The church has ever been the foundress of schools, colleges and universities for she must in her divine mission secure the growth and development of her children unto God. She instructs and trains their minds carefully and well. All suspicion and distrust to the contrary notwithstanding, it can be said without pride or boast that the training given in Catholic colleges and schools is of first quality and character. Our schools have long since outgrown the weaknesses of their infancy. To-day by unsought comment of honest observers they are recognized as of excellent rank and achievement.

"But the church is not satisfied with mere intellectual attainments. She is concerned with moral and spiritual growth and perfection. Her purpose is to prepare souls for heaven, in the fulfillment of man's highest destiny. Nothing that makes souls nobler, finer, purer is foreign to her purpose and her labor. By right divine, these souls are in her care and she must urge them to their sternest effort in the attainment of the ideals set high before men by the Divine Founder of Christianity.

"Rejoice I have said to you, for the children of this parish are to have their hearts trained in that which is good. A day of joy indeed when you see rising before you a schoolhouse, which in ideals, in truth, in teachers, is a fit dwelling-place for angels.

"The ceremony of this blessed day will be a long and holy memory. When the activities of him who planned and those who labor now have long since ceased, this school will continue its work for God. Generations of Catholic children will eat here of the bread of life and drink of the milk of truth. Here they will learn to walk in that which is good. Leaving here they will walk in the ways of their hearts—ways crowded with devoted service to home, church and nation—ways which lead to the fulfillment of the purpose of true education—the final achievement of man's full dignity and destiny in the glorious eternal vision of His Father who is in Heaven."

The singing of "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name" by the vast congregation, brought to a close the exercises, which marked a red letter day in the history of Catholicism in Andover.

The new school will be finished and ready for occupancy January, 1918, and will be a substantial addition to the educational institutions of the town. The supervising architect is John Broadhurst of Lawrence, who is looking after every detail for a perfect building.

HISTORY OF THE SCHOOL

The Convent was formerly the large fourteen-room residence of Horace Tyer. It is situated in one of the most picturesque parts of town, at the corner of Central and Chestnut streets, about three minutes walk from the parish church. It was purchased by Rev. F. S. Riordan, O. S. A. in October 1913, and in the early spring was remodelled for school and convent purposes.

On September 3, 1914, the Sisters of Notre Dame were installed as teachers. Historic Andover, long famed for its educational establishments, could now boast of another seat of learning, small it is true, but firm as the rock of Peter on which it was built.

Early on the morning of September 8, the little ones assembled at the church, where Holy Mass was offered, to beg God's blessing on an undertaking which affects, not only the welfare of individuals, but of the State. After Mass, each child received an American flag. With colors flying the little ones proceeded to the school where eighty-three were registered in the first three grades.

The numbers continued to increase, so that now, the present class-rooms are taxed to their utmost capacity. Despite the troublous times it was found absolutely necessary to erect a building which could accommodate the rapidly growing classes. With eager heart and willing hand, the zealous pastor set to work, ably assisted by his noble, generous people.

May 25, 1917, saw the stakes laid for the new school. Three days later, May 28, at ten o'clock, the pastor, assisted by Fathers Donovan and Fogarty, and surrounded by their little flock, turned the first sod, with blessing and prayer. The children sang "America," and "The Cross and The Flag."

During the summer months rapid progress has been made on the new building, so that on September 23, the crown was set on the hopes of pastor and people by the beautifully impressive ceremony of the laying of the corner stone of the new St. Augustines Parochial School.

The building promises to be one of the finest in the State. Andover may well be proud of it, and the devoted citizens who have made it a possibility.

Massachusetts State Guard

The local company last night formed an escort for a detachment of the Fifth Royal Highlanders of Canada, otherwise known as the Black Watch, who appeared in Lawrence for the purpose of recruiting.

The company were taken to Lawrence in cars belonging to various members and was turned over to Major Edgar G. Holt of the Second Battalion at 7.45. The other State Guard companies who marched as escorts were those of Lawrence and Methuen, accompanied by a band from Boxford. After spirited addresses and a few selections by the Black Watch Pipers in the Lawrence Armory the Canadians were escorted to the station in time to return to Boston that night.

The local company is planning a field day on Brothers Field upon the occasion of the Second Battalion drill to be held here October 12, Columbus Day, in which four companies, the Lawrence, Methuen, Reading and Andover, will take part under command of Major E. G. Holt.

The committee has been appointed to have charge of the field day sports and entertainment before and after the parade and drill. The following men are on the committee: Private Roy H. Bradford, treasurer and chairman, Sergeants Henry G. Tyer and Nathan C. Hamblin, Corporal Alfred Robb, and Private George A. Christie.

A meeting of this committee has already been held and a tentative program been arranged, although changes may be made later. It is hoped that the 103rd Regiment Band from Boxford can be procured to help in the entertainment. The program:

2 to 3 p.m. Sports (a) Races and games for the children; (b) Sports for the members of the Second Battalion of the M.S.G.
